Chapter 1 by Joey Moldano

Hello fellow reader, I want to play a game.

"If a slime eats a plort that is not there own, then it is a largo. For example, if you have a rock and tabby, then feeding the rock with a tabby plort will make it a tabby rock slime. Getting a largo (hybrid) and feeding it another unrelated plort makes it a tarr."

If words could describe alternative reality, dream or even dimension, what would we read?
If words could describe such enviroment, activity or even daily routine, what would we read?

Actualy you sort of did right now.

Chapter 2 by Linkie

I am a large rock which was once a tabby. I am a rock which morphed into a large large scaly lake that I live in. I am a rock which morphed into a large scaly lake that I live in. That smelled really bad.

Chapter 3 by Yukatta~

I had a bad dream. Then, I woke up and realized I'm still in the middle of the dreamland. And the series starts here. I woke up, and it's still a dream. It seems like a neverending cycle after I chase "me in reality".
